

The Creamery Package Manufacturing Company

of Albany, NY, had its CP corporate logo turned into a perfin (C258) and clearly used a lot of stamps since the pattern is E-rated. Now, the editor is curious to know what kind of packaging this firm really manufactured back in 1909—before widespread refrigeration. Milk bottles? Butter tubs? Or maybe they are the folks who invented those little squares of cardboard that butter patties used to be served on in restaurants? The cover is from the collection of Richard L. Learn (#3265).
